Stop the ReRoute tells the dramatic story of a community's opposition to the State of Minnesota's plan to drive a road through its birthplace, Camp Coldwater between Minnehaha Park and Fort Snelling—land considered historic to some and sacred to others. This inspiring film bears witness to the commitment of citizen activists to live lightly on Grandmother Earth, preserve precious natural resources, and resist car culture at the end of the Petroleum Age, as neighborhood and environmental champions, Native American activists, and young people coalesce in nonviolent civil disobedience.
