TWO EARLY LISTS OF MIXED-BLOOD SIOUX

The treaty between the U.S. and the Sioux Indians of the Mississippi of September 29, 1837 provided for a fund of $110,000 to be divided among the mixed bloods connected with the tribe. In the summer of 1838 two commissioners, W. L. D. Ewing and S. J. Pease came to the upper Mississippi valley and took testimony, eventually coming up with a list of 200 mixed-bloods which was then submitted to the tribe for its approval. After a few names had been stricken, the list was approved. This list, which is found in the "Special Files" of the U.S. Office of Indian Affairs, no. 200 (National Archives RG 75, Microfilm M574 Roll 59) contains the name, age, degree of Sioux blood and residence of each individual.

The list is important because it identifies individually many early natives of the upper Mississippi River valley and provides for them much detail not usually found otherwise until the 1850 census. The maiden names are given for several married women and the ages appear to be reasonably accurate. The degree of Indian blood should be considered more cautiously as the principal concern was to verify that the applicant had at least 1/4 Sioux blood, the minimum required for inclusion. In fact some of the quarter bloods are known from other sources to be 3/4 Sioux. Also, because different individuals received differing amounts, various members of a particular family will frequently be found widely separated on the list.

In 1841 James Duane Doty, Governor of Wisconsin Territory, as part of a series of treaties with various bands of the Sioux in the Minnesota area, negotiated an agreement with the mixed bloods to sell a tract of land granted them in an 1830 treaty. The 1841 treaty, which was never ratified, was signed by a number of the mixed bloods. A transcript of this treaty and its signatures can be found in the "Letters Received by the Office of Indian Affairs: St. Peters Agency" (National Archives RG 75, Microfilm M234 Roll 759).

The signers were only a portion of those affected by the treaty, but were probably all the commissioners could induce to sign in the short time available to them. Although the list is therefore quite incomplete, for those families it includes, it does provide useful information such as names of children living at the time, some maiden names and many specified relationships.

These lists are just a sample of the records created by the federal government in its dealings with the various tribes and their mixed-blood relatives, many of which have genealogical value. Since many of the individuals involved appear only infrequently in more commonly used records the Indian records, as these examples show, can be an important additional source of otherwise unrecorded genealogical information. However, much research remains to be done to identify and locate useful material, to bring it to the attention of the genealogical public, and to make it more easily accessible.
